Paul George

Director, Peninsula Peace and Justice Center

The accepted wisdom in the mainstream media -- and among US lawmakers -- is that Iran is "racing" to develop a nuclear weapon. But the public record shows that to be a questionable assumption. What's really going on? How much of a threat does Iran present? And what are the possibilities for war?

Drawing on public sources and the public statements of Administration officials, George casts a light on the fear-mongering that underlies much of the mainstream reporting -- and political posturing -- behind the alleged urgency to confront Iran's nuclear program.

Paul George is Director of Peninsula Peace and Justice Center, the Peninsula's leading progressive grassroots activist organization.
